Once upon a time there was a king who wanted to be the most powerful man in his kingdom, but his power was eclipsed by that of a magician who said he could see into the future. One day, the king sketched out a deal to prove that the magician couldn't see into the future. He would ask him what day he was going to die on, and at that moment he would take his sword and kill the magician... What the powerful king never imagined is that his answer will force the king to look after the magician's life even more than his own.

Bucay and Gusti are united once more in a book that will make children (and their parents) think.
