This is the love story between Morvan and Lua, two young nobles in the Spanish Middle Ages. Morvan is widely known as 'the impassive' because of his ability to hide his emotions. After years of service to Prince Pelagius he has finally been given a feudal seat to occupy. But as he settles down to his comfortable new life, he never imagined a very beautiful thief would try to steal his horse. Lua is the younger daughter of Galo, the chief of a large medieval settlement. When Morvan arrives at his castle to take the place of his father, Lua's first reaction to the new lord of the manor is purely antagonistic. However, when Morvan becomes betrothed to Alla, Lua's older sister, feelings are awakened within her that she had previously kept hidden. War, betrayal, jealousy and passion. But will love prevail?
