The arrival of Morgana disturbs the apparent tranquility of Merlin's life in the wood of Esmelle. Arthur's half-sister and lover comes in search of answers to her unhappiness. From her grief and Merlin's memories they thread together the reasons for the ruin of Avalon and the fall of Camelot.

A reflection on taking responsibility for our actions. A debate about the need to be involved in historic moments. Sacrificed in the struggle between two views of the world, Morgana questions the legitimacy of our arguments. But does her victimhood make her any more innocent?
