Commissioner Valtierra, a nostalgic, tango-loving native of Buenos Aires, is chief of the Political Section of the Buenos Aires police and has blood on his hands. A revolutionary group has condemned him to death for all the torture and murders in which he has been involved and to avenge their comrades. One member of the organization is The Englishman, an idealistic student from the provinces who will find himself involved in an execution for the first time. His revolutionary determination clashes with his personal scruples, his fears and doubts about killing a man.

A political cop thriller which is also morally disturbing.

Premio Nacional de Bellas Artes de México for his book "Cuentos de guerra sucia" ("Tales From A Dirty War").

Quotes: "Socialism is not a religion, despite its many worshippers. If the many mistakes committed in its name are not recognized, we shall not be able to make progress with the necessary reflections on the relationship between violence and politics".

SERGIO BUFANO

"From 1976 to 1983, we Argentinians learned that {...} when a dozen guerrillas died in combat without wounds on either side, {...}, they had been assassinated without mercy".
