Marisa is a teenage girl full of questions that can't be answered, of fears and concerns about herself, her body and her feelings. At sixteen years old she doesn't yet know what love is, nor above all, who to give it to. Again and again she asks questions to her image in the mirror. Looking at it she feels an invisible pain rising up from her inner depths. Her best friend, the boy who will open the doors to a new world, her parents and her sister form the space in which her doubts will be resolved in a most unexpected way. And so she takes the step; through the looking glass.
