What happened to Dani Santana? The journalist is in plaster from head to foot in hospital after an attempted assassination. In the hospital, which is a world with its own rules, he makes friends with Gratu, a young rugby player who has ended up in a wheelchair. Gratu, a restless patient and compulsive hacker, drags Santana to investigate certain practices that have led the health system to ruin. Meanwhile, one of the richest men in the world comes to Barcelona: the Mexican businessman Roberto M. Faura, mobile network market leader, who is negotiating with the government over the development of Europe's biggest theme park. Citizen protests, attempts to bypass the law and the conditions of power will bring to its knees project that seems vital to make the country's economy buoyant once more. But not everything is as the newspapers say it is.
