Season: AUTUMN 2010

A crisis was originally the critical moment in the course of an illness, and a good crisis was one which brought the patient back to normal health. The economic crisis is just the most tangible symptom of a deeper crisis which is affecting numerous areas. This is a systemic crisis, rooted in our obsolete way of looking at the world. A Good Crisis shows where we are and how we got here, and offers a realistic, intelligent and audacious alternative, in order to guide us towards a healthier, wiser and more ecological society and a saner world.
