Valle and Cáceres were in a pop rock band in the 90s. They practiced together, played together, got drunk together. It's been many years since they last saw each other when they meet in a café. They talk animatedly and remember, laughing, anecdotes from the past. Until Valle announces to his friend that he has decided to kill him and will do it soon. The rest of the novel is like a wave spreading out from this first revelation, from where the novel advances at a fast pace until reaching a surprising and strangely lyrical denouement that will leave the reader breathless.
