“The truth, my dear Natalia, is that you would need to write many volumes to explain my adventures on Earth and in any case there would still be interesting things left in the inkwell. You have to realise that the world is ours, it belongs to the Dark Ones. The others never even existed. It’s all a story, a fantasy invented by mortals. Life is ours, just as death is and the Universe and all that existed and ever will exist.” It’s not a good time for Eblus the devil. Humiliated by his worst enemy and stripped of his power, he must regain his old position again. At the same time, he must fight against the most strange, irritating, and awkward thing that has ever happened to him: he has fallen in love. And not just with anyone. With Natalia, a sixteen-year-old mortal who doesn’t take the slightest notice of him. With the most ambitious, unscrupulous human he knows. In Crypta, Care Santos gives us an inimitable story in which fantasy is married to black humour.
