Can you imagine being a flesh and blood person living in a paper world? The intrepid Candela returns with a new adventure full of folds and origami figures. What is origami, you ask? Well, it's the same as paper folding but in Japanese. One rainy Saturday morning in November, Candela and her friends decide to go to the Science Museum, where they find a curious exhibition of objects made of folded paper. One careless moment in the castle room is enough for Candela to become trapped in a universe as fragile as it is incredible. Non-stop paper adventures beautifully illustrated by Mercè López.
