Angela's life is overturned with the arrival of a mysterious blond boy to her town. Intrigued by his sad eyes and his city ways, Angela can show him how to enjoy her own small world, shaped by her relationship with animals, the green fields, and the never-ending blue skies. The weeks they spend together are full of discoveries and emotions, and will change Angela's life forever. Rodríguez merges a love of animals and nature into the poetry of rural life, and the two-tone illustrations by Patricia Metola submerge the reader into a pictorially sensitive universe.
