The purest of oral African traditions, known as Nisintory, evoking the collective action of telling and listening to stories, displays all its magic and luminosity in Fumilayo Johnson's stories. In Granny Chioma's Stories this young Hispanic-Guinean writer presents a world brimming with life and unlimited beauty, reinforced by the extraordinary quality and originality of the La Mancha illustrator, Pedro Cervantes. With their roots in her memory of her familial and cultural heritage, the author's stories testify to a legacy that will move the present generation as it also preserves a patrimony of incalculable value.
