Samuel is hardly afraid of anything: not dogs, or heights, or strangers or storms... He's not even afraid of snakes! There's only one thing that scares him a little bit... Would you like to know what it is? A story for all those children who, like Samuel, face up to their fears... And they often manage to overcome them! He has always been interested in the topic of fear and courage, and the ways in which one confronts one's fears depends on way one faces up to life and the world. The aim of the story is to offer a good dose of self confidence to children as they identify with a character who has the same fears as them, who faces up to them in a similar manner, and who throughout the story is seen as courageous. This story wants young children to feel brave.
