The unforeseen incidents that befall a little boy trying to create an album of farts, trumps and rippers. As nobody in his family wants to explain what a 'fart' is, he decides to find out for himself and classify them. A story that aims to break taboos and please both children and adults. This book defends the naturalness of things like 'farts', like many other things in our lives, and shows the innate childhood curiosity to discover and classify the unknown.
