In the summer of 1965 Carolina and the Braves sang with the Beatles at gigs in Madrid and Barcelona. The whole country knew their songs and the entire world was ready to fall in love with them but in 1966 they disappeared from the scene and nobody ever heard of them again. This is the story of a boy and a girl who met in Benicàssim one night in 1963 and dared to chase their dreams. It is also the story of a group of friends who loved each other above all else and together, did the impossible: they had hope and fought for what was right, even if it meant losing each other. And it's the story of a girl who years afterwards decides to discover the truth about her family; and of a journalist who remembers that there are ideas that are worth living for, breathing and loving for. Because perhaps, the only way to understand our present is by looking back through our past.
