Never were the love and complicity between two people so strong as to make them feel like one, able to face any mishap or adversity. A centenarian grandmother and her intrepid granddaughter are determined to overcome all obstacles to uncover the mystery that they have inherited. The reader is led on an exciting search through the roots of the past that awakens questions for the present, and immerses them in the greatest adventure imaginable that will delight, stimulate and amuse the deepest and noble depths of our being. This is a captivating mystery that starts as simple curiosity and becomes an obsession. If you try to deny your origins, lack a sense of family, or you don't dare embark on a great adventure, don't read this book. But if these sound like tempting premises, read on. Everything happens for a reason...
