Carolina, a young journalist, is commissioned to interview Martín Vera, a famous and mysterious painter whom everyone thought was dead - until he resurfaced from nowhere when he exhibited one of his paintings at the Prado Museum. Martín, reluctant to give interviews, sees something in Carolina that makes him agree to talk to her, even going so far as to reveal a major family secret which had been concealed for too long. For Carolina, getting the interview will mean a complete turnaround in her life. Discover this exciting story of life and war told in three voices, where nothing is as it seems.

Additional information Prizes and reviews:

Natalia Olmedo calls to mind the drama and romance of a great writer like Kate Morton, but with her own particular style. This novel set in three eras reveals the story of a mysterious painter with a troubled life.
