Every year the heroine of this story receives a very special birthday present: a cut-out house. As a result, she has been able to create a village of five little houses in her bedroom. But now her parents have split up and she has had to divide the little houses between two bedrooms. It is almost her birthday and she is very worried. Will her parents remember to give her a new house? A story that addresses the delicate topic of divorce and how it can affect the youngest members of a family in a gentle and original way.
