Mr Pàgueiras can't scratch his back because he has an umbrella instead of hands! But he's in luck because the woman on the first floor, Mrs Solmmina, has more than a thousand hands. Then again, how does she manage to cut all those nails? Well just ask the Rosseti sisters, on the second floor, who have scissors instead of legs. A group of outlandish characters suddenly appears in a building on Quiénsabe Street with stories to make you laugh out loud. Each of them has a terrible problem, but there's always a neighbour ready to lend a hand. Behind the neighbours' highly original solutions are ideas about coexistence and solidarity to remind us that we all have the ability to help someone who needs it.

"I love the way the narrator is a child who gathers the meanings of words that surprise him and explains them in his way. The illustrations wonderfully complete the book." Blog
