Have you had enough of being trampled on and undervalued in your place of work? Do your colleagues take the credit for you hard work, steal your ideas and laugh at your shirts? Does your boss bully you or set you dreary tasks? Dr House, John Locke, Dexter Morgan, Hannibal Lecter, John McLane and Marge Simpson herself appear in this book as experts coaches. Based on their personal experiences, with the incomparable stamp of their tough outlooks, they give advice on and methods for standing up to your boss and 'companyons' in a much more effective and practical manner than that offered by any psychologist . You really will become the tough guy you always wanted to be. This is a hilarious satire of the self-help and business management genres, which makes use of the brilliant dialogues of some of the most famous television personalities.
