A dizzying blend of the purest noir and the legendary romances of chivalry.

What turns the most exclusive horses in the world into murderers? What is hidden behind a series of unexpected fatal accidents? There are too many enigmas weighing on the elegant world of one of the most famous equestrian institutions in Europe: Cenithaeure. In the midst of a struggle to control what is also a fabulous economic empire, Lluvia Ruiz-Gollury, an attractive Olympic champion, goes on a personal crusade. She must clear up the enigmas and battle against her fellow scheming members of the board of directors, and her only ally is an old rival, Alcaudón, a jockey who abandoned his career in horseriding for the nomadic life of the circus. Óscar Lobato guides the reader through the most exotic landscapes of the equestrian world, from Hungary to Great Britain by way of the Andalusian countryside.
