'Breve teoría del viaje...' poses quite a challenge to most accepted literary conventions surrounding what the formal nature of a story is. The six stories here open themselves to the complete experience of being human, placing us in all corners of the world, from the arid landscapes of the Mediterranean coast to the pages of the brilliant Serbian writer Milorad Pavic - 'here is the journey'. Thanks to his extraordinarily versatile prose, a nomadic writing style that adapts itself to the various spiritual, physical or imaginary places of each story, and to the fragile individuality of the inhabitants, Crusat leads these buffeted characters to the edge of the abyss of fears, doubts and desires that make up the modern world.
