Elijah Al-Saud is a charming young man related to the Arab royal family, a powerful millionaire who heads a French security company that in reality offers clandestine defence and espionage services to the highest bidder. Matilde Martínez is a young Argentine paediatrician who dreams of going to Africa with an NGO. Although at first she rejects him, she and Elijah end up experiencing a Parisian love story before she leaves for the Congo to follow her dreams. The secrets they both jealously guard pursue them and they will have to confront each other in a passionate, dangerous adventure linked to revolutionary atomic inventions that might end up in the hands of Saddam Hussein, in the middle of the Israeli-Palestine conflict and all kinds of hidden networks of global geopolitics. A trilogy full of intrigue, passion and real global conflicts that make this book impossible to put down.
