Victim to the current crisis, to past ones and to his proverbial bad luck, Leonardo Expósito takes a radical decision: he mortgages his mother's house and enrolls in a prestigious business school. There he intends to hobnob with other businessmen and get back on the road to success, while hiding the downfalls of his professional career and his past life. But, much to his surprise, the school manager is the same man responsible for the desperate situation that he is currently in. Shocked and angered, he sets out to avenge the wrongs this man has committed against him, forgetting though that he is infinitely richer, more powerful and influential than him.

After the success of El secreto del gazpacho, Gervasio Posadas returns with a comedy about money, ambition and love in which millionaires, losers, retired mistresses, bankers, environmentalists and butchers, all seek their best interest.
