Season: SPRING 2012

This poetry collection could be the beginning of a dialogue between the body and language, with literature as the only space where this could take place. As well as this exploration of the limits of expression, "Estremas" ("Extremes") also has "a kind of persistence", a search for a new lineage or new reading of what "burns without lineage", which can be seen as a liberation. The poems are rooted in rage and vertigo, rebelling awkwardly and breathing wearily in the silences they open up.
